Four Fem Leads Cast In 'Shrew'

Double casting in the female roles marks Lamar's first show of the year, William Shakespeare's "The Taming of the Shrew," to be presented in the auditorium October 22, 23, 25 and 26.

Director George Bogusch, new this year to Lamar's speech department, decided on two players each for the roles of Katherine, the shrew, and Bianca, her sister, in order to give more women a chance to participate.

Shakespeare's plays are noticeably scarce of women's parts, due to the fact that when they were written young boys played all Fritsche; and Lola Lemkowitz and Anna Lee Aulbaugh, respectively. Al Smithers will appear as Petruchio, the man who tames the shrew. George Edwards will play Baptista; Jerry King, Lucentio; Paul James, Gremio; and Frank Myers, Hortensio.

Fred Mills will portray Tranio; George Anderson, Biondello; Sam Havens, Charles Posten, Curtis. Vernon Rosson will be seen as a haberdasher and Judith Brownlee as the widow.

Four roles, Vincentio, the tailor, the pedant, and a servant, were still vacant after rehearsals started last Friday.
